A busy and populous city in the East Bay region of San Francisco Bay, Oakland is home to more than 400,000 individuals who enjoy its contrasting but beautiful landscape and environment. It is a city where hills and flatlands, houses and offices, and ocean view and cityscape blend well together, creating stunning scenery. Despite being prone to high-intensity earthquakes, Oakland has preserved many of its historical structures with architectural styles inspired from the neoclassical and gothic eras. Although the city has maintained its old buildings, Oakland constructed new modern buildings that give life to the cityscape as well — an example of which is the Oakland Cathedral that features modern architecture built entirely in the 21st century.

Since its establishment in 2001, Integrity Remodeling has been providing home renovations, restorations, new construction, home additions, and other general contracting services in neighborhoods within Oakland and the San Francisco Bay Area. The company is owned by Eli Israel, an expert builder who studied Landscape Architecture at the University of Rhode Island. Learning about classical architecture and building designs of New England were some of his inspirations to pursue a career in construction. For 17 years he has maintained the company's reputation for consistently delivering big and small projects on time and within budget.

An example of his work was featured in Sunset — a local lifestyle magazine. The home was a 100-year-old bungalow that was transformed into a mid-century modern home with a slight touch of Danish theme and style. Integrity Remodeling has also received an award from the city of Piedmont for Best Renovation in 2012.
